The Joy of Being Guided on the Sunlit Path | Divyanshi in conversation with Leela

In this interview with Leela from YoungOvation, Divyanshi shares in-depth how her journey unfolded from a young adult with deep questions to her finding the answers and taking a leap of faith to go to Pondicherry. The conversation is filled with inspiration, wisdom and offers courage that anyone on this journey can draw from :)
Sidra from batch 8 paves her journey forward

I’m Sidra from Swadharma batch 8 and recently I enrolled for Masters in Architecture which Specializes in Environmental design from Faculty of Architecture and Planning which is a part of Dr, A. P. J. Abdul Kalam Technical University, Lucknow.

The reason to take this course up is that I have always been inclined towards environmental concerns and its problems. By being an architect, I know exactly how I can contribute towards the cause.

Environmental design is the process of addressing surrounding environmental parameters when devising plans, programs, policies, buildings, or products. It seeks to create spaces that will enhance the natural, social, cultural, and physical environment of particular areas.

It also deals with sustainable building techniques and methods and adopting energy-efficient methods for construction because India being a developing country, is facing an excessive growth in infrastructure development which in return is adding a large amount of carbon emission.
Ayushi from batch 5 weaves into KalaKai

While the word came to a standstill in the past few months, few of us swadharmis got an opportunity to reflect and work on our inner calling once again. It's like life makes you stop and restart all over again because one Swadharma wasn't enough.

Being a graduate of fashion, I could understand how the industry has been hit the most in this pandemic. With time I began observing how experiences seemed more valued for all of us than just a product. With this gaze of reflection at my learnings till now and taking the leap, I decided to develop an experience in something I truly believed in. I took up handlooms for my Micro Project during the Swadharma Summer School.

On reading more, I came across an article of Kabir Das where he was mentioned as a weaver by profession, and reading his Doha I understood how he could practice mindfulness and connect to himself and the Divine with each thread that was being woven.

It was this experience of practicing an age-old craft by oneself and with our loved ones, that KalaKai was born. An attempt to bring Culture + Craft + Creating together. It was my intention to discover traditional activities in an adaptive way for every generation to experience our roots.

From Marketing to Managing: Drishti’s Story

It was in Auroville, back in 2018, that Drishti found herself going back to the joy she experienced standing in a field in the middle of the night trying to manage logistics for an event that was due in less than 12 hours. She took this back to the city and combined her love for Music and Management to work in the capacity of an Artist Manager with India’s leading Jazz Club and performance venue, “The Piano Man”.

SANT KABIR DAS

A weaver, a poet, a legend.

Most of us have grown up reading Sant Kabir’s dohas and have known him as a poet.

While Kabir Das was a weaver by profession, it is during the process of weaving that he could truly connect himself with the Divine and create wonderful pieces of fabric.

The weaver, getting good or bad yarn & connecting karma with it, weaves beautifully.”

THE INDIAN TRADITION

Soothing, therapeutic & meditative

We have always found simple joy and practiced mindfulness through various activities in life. It could be cooking, dancing, painting; ones that help us be fully aware & present, leading to connect within.

Experiences like these have been passed down through generations in the form of art and crafts in India. Artisans dedicate a lifetime of work to handcraft minute details and bring phenomenal pieces of art to our homes.
TPM, although, had different plans for her because for the last two years she had been doing marketing for the brand!

When the pandemic struck, Drishti decided to take a step back (rather forward!) and shift gears to studying. It was very important for her to contextualize her goals as there had been times in the past where the goals were either unconscious, untimely or so much energy was being spent in just making the choice that there was not enough to walk the path that was chosen. In June 2020, her life truly seemed to turn over a new leaf. She found a home, she found herself (all over again), and most importantly she found something invisible that made everything make sense. It's not a stretch to say that she found a reason to wake up every morning even if it was to work towards finding what she liked doing when she did wake up :P
In September 2020, Drishti started at the Vedica Scholars Programme for Women in New Delhi, India. At Vedica, Drishti is being trained in Leadership Practice and Management over 18 months in-residence. It has not been very long and Drishti can already find herself crystallizing her insights and embarking on a new adventure. She is happy to have found an institution that practices a similar value system as herself and is thrilled+grateful to work towards becoming a version of herself that serves her best. You can read more about Vedica Scholars here.
